Section Summary THE ALLIES FIGHT BACK

When the United States entered the war, President Roosevelt met with British prime minister Winston Churchill. They decided to attack German forces in North Africa before an invasion of Europe. This angered the Soviet Union, which had been hoping for help on the Eastern front.

New technology that had not been used in prior wars helped in the effort. Long-range planes dropped bombs on German factories, railroads, and cities, and sonar detected German U-boats.

HALTING THE GERMAN ADVANCE

By 1942 the Germans and the British were fighting in North Africa. They were fighting for control of the Suez Canal. The British forces stopped the German attack at the Battle of El Alamein. American general Dwight D. Eisenhower led U.S. and British troops through Morocco and Algeria. Trapped, the Germans surrendered in May 1943.

Why did the Germans and the British fight in North Africa?

After taking control of North Africa, the Allies moved into Europe. They attacked Italy in 1943. Italian leaders removed Mussolini from power and surrendered to the Allies. Germany sent troops to Italy to stop the Allies. German forces were not pushed out of Italy until 1945.

At the same time, German and Soviet troops were fighting on the Eastern front in the Soviet Union. Hitler ordered the German troops not to retreat, but Germany did not send enough supplies or fresh troops. Eventually, the German forces surrendered due to supply shortages and the harsh northern winter. The Soviets blocked the German advance at the Battle of Stalingrad, a key turning point in the war. More than 1 million Soviet soldiers died and about 800,000 Axis soldiers were killed.

Where was the Eastern front of World War II in 1943?

THE D-DAY INVASION

After succeeding in North Africa and Italy, the Allies made plans to move into France. At the time the Germans controlled France. General Eisenhower was in charge of planning the largest sea-to-land invasion ever attempted. The invasion took place on D-Day, named for the "designated day" of the attack—June 6, 1944.

More than 156,000 Allied troops landed on five beaches in Normandy, France. The Germans had placed mines and soldiers along the coast to repel the invasion. Although they suffered heavy losses, the Allies took control of all five beaches by the end of D-Day. Then they could begin moving west through France toward Germany.
